Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl Harriet Ann Jacobs

Initially published in 1861, "Incidents in the Life of a Slave Girl" documents the early life of Harriet Ann Jacobs prior to the commencement of the American Civil War. Jacobs began writing her memoir when she escaped slavery and fled to New York. She fearlessly addresses the struggles and sexual abuse that female slaves faced on the plantations and the ends that they were forced to resort to, in order to protect their children from being sold away. Her appeal was intended primarily to white women in the Northern states who she felt did not have a true understanding of slavery. To protect herself, Jacobs used the pseudonym Linda Brent, as well as disguising the identities of her characters. Lydia Maria Child, an abolitionist, agreed to write the Preface and edit the book; the two women remained friends for the remainder of their lives.
