A reclusive photographer hired Sharon McCone to find his missing roommate in a fishing village. But the roommate turns up only too soon dead beneath a rotting pier. McCone discovers that small towns are never as sleepy as they look. She confronts a host of suspects and runs into interference from locals who don't like her city girl sleuthing. Before long she's an unwilling player in a deadly game. "Vivid street scenes, yearning characters and a plot that wrenches." -Chicago Sun Times
