Jealous Love: Romantic Suspense Thriller Maya Moss

A criminal-defense attorney, Mark Janis, exhibits increasingly erratic behavior as his jealousy builds over his new girlfriend's ex. His girlfriend Leah Winston has a child with her ex-boyfriend, Brayden Carter, and they have a connection that seems to defy their split.

Mark is working on defending a company from corporate fraud. Leah is getting tired of rescuing companies from greed but it's a good job and she needs the money for her daughter. She's recently started to date Mark because he's been making advances on her for a while. She figures that he has a steady income and insurance and she thinks perhaps he would be a good provider for her daughter. But this move is more due to world-weariness and practicality than gold-digging or romance. She figures she's an adult and mother now and she has to make practical, not romantic decisions.

Mark has a secret history of paranoid behavior and he begins to wrongly suspect that the ex-boyfriend is hacking his email account and listening in on his phone conversations. Matters escalate until Mark confronts Brayden, shoots and attempts to kill him. Brayden records everything on his smartphone.

Leah and Brayden were young parents who weren't together long before the arrival of their daughter. The stress of raising a child and trying to figure out their lives and build a career tore them apart. But they've always held a candle for each other and harbor a secret desire to get back together.

Will Brayden survive the tragedy and will he and Leah ever get back together?
