Excerpt from Boston Inside Out, Sins of a Great City! A Story of Real Life

A few weeks only, and "Boston Inside Out" reaches its fifth thousand. I have waited for the critics, and they have spoken. Now is my time to speak. My life-work gives me the right to speak. For twenty years and more have I toiled for the downtrodden, the poor, battled against vice and crime in Boston. I have battled, sacrificed, and toiled as no other man has done. To self-indulgence I have been a stranger. My life has been almost a torture. No vacation, no recreation, nothing but toil, toil, toil! The burdens of a sin-stricken people have oppressed me. The sorrows of lost souls have stricken me down to the borders of the grave. Poor newsboys have burdened my soul. At times, death has seemed my only relief.

During all these years not an unkind word has come from the Boston press.
